Sisel Safe Packaging

Toxic chemicals like phthalates, BPA, and other known carcinogens are commonly found in plastics. These additives often leach out of the containers and enter the material within, ultimately finding their way into our bodies. When they do, they often remain in our bodies for decades and can cause serious havoc to our health. Some are known to be hormone disrupters which affect the developing fetus and young children by causing a variety of endocrine and reproductive system defects including malformations of newborns, undescended testicles, abnormal sperm, low sperm counts, feminization of males and masculinization of females, thyroid dysfunction, and various types of cancer such as cervical, breast and prostate cancer.

Sisel avoids packaging that may contain potentially harmful chemicals and uses only those containers and packaging that are considered safe.
